competitive and technology neutral manner. Petitioner urges the FCC to “be mindful of congressional intent and encourage Internet innovation, investment, and growth by declining to regulate FWD.”² The FCC should not be seduced by this entreaty. Rather, as it evaluates new offerings such as Free World Dialup, it should reaffirm its sensitivity to balancing the preservation of universal service along with encouraging Internet innovation, investment and growth. As it stated in its Report to Congress:

We must take care to preserve the vibrant growth of these new technologies and services. But we must also remain constant in our commitment to ensuring universal service.³

CONCLUSION

On the basis of the foregoing, USTA urges that the Petition be denied without prejudice to it being filed again at an appropriate future date.

Respectfully submitted,
